Robert Campbell, Genealogy: A record of the Descendants of Robert Campbell, County Tyrone, Ulster, Ireland. by Rev. Frederic Campbell, Brooklyn, N. Y. Published by the Author, 1909.

Rev. Hugh Campbell, who obtained his M. A. degree in Edinburgh in 1714, spent a year at Scarboro, Maine, in 1720 and was succeeded in June, 1722, by Rev. Hugh Henry, p. 353, ibid.

CAMPBELLS OF DUNTROON From "Camberra's First Hundred Years and After."

Robert Campbell, commonly referred to as "Merchant" Campbell of "The Wharf," Sydney, to distinguish him from at least three others of the name, was born in 1769, as younger son of the last Laird of Ashfield, in Argyllshire, Scotland. As the Ashfield family was a younger branch of the Campbells of Duntroon Castle (standing on Loch Crinan in Argyll), he was thus also a "Cadet of Duntroon," and is proudly proclaimed to be such on his monument in St. Philip's Church, Sydney.

Robert Campbell came to Sydney in 1798 from Calcutta. He had five sons namely: 1. John 1802-1886, 2., 3. Charles 1809-1888, 4. George married Marriane Col-linson, 5.

Earl of Argyll is commissioned to root out and expatriate "The MacGregor Clan" (The Duke of Argyll is head of the Campbell Clan). "The Scotch Irish in America" by Henry James Ford, p. 85. "Dr. Norman MacDowell Grier of Wagner College, Station Island is my authority for stating, owing to some unknown reason, the 'MacGregor Clan' were prohibited from using that name and they were compelled to go by the name of 'Grier' or 'Greer'. This is of especial interest to me since my maternal grandmother was Margaret (Greer) Fulton, 1819-1906, b. County Antrim, Ireland, d. Osage City, Kansas."

Capt. Lauchlin Campbell, of the Island of Islay, attracted by a proclamation issued by the Governor of New York, brought over 83 families of Highlanders, in Nov. 1740. Lauchlin Campbell died before 1764, p. 252, ibid.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, son of John Campbell, was b. in York Co., Pa., about 1750. He enlisted as a private in Capt. Michael Dondel's Co. attached to Col. Wm. Thompson's battalion of Riflemen, in July 1775. He died at his residence in Monoghan Twp., York Co., Pa., Jan. 19, 1815. He was of Scotch Irish descent. He returned as Capt. Lieut. on account of wounds received at Germantown, 1/1/1781-1783, Pa. Mag. Vol. xi. pub. 1887, p. 69.

THE CAMPBELL FAMILY

The following genealogical table is compiled largely from data found in historical papers owned by Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Virginia.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL—

The following is a quotation from an address by the Hon. Hugh Blair Grigsby, L.L.D., entitled "The Founders of Washington College," delivered June 22, 1870:

"Duncan Campbell, who never left Scotland, had three sons, Dougald, Robert and John, who removed to Ireland in 1700 and settled in Coleraine, in the county of Derry. Most of the descendants of these three brothers, between 1730 and 1740 emigrated to Pennsylvania and thence came to Augusta (Augusta, Va.), as Augusta then was. The descendants of Dougald are said to have settled in what is now Rockbridge. Many of John's descendants are to be found in Washington county. Three brothers, sons of Robert, namely, Hugh, John and Charles, settled in Augusta proper."

Duncan Campbell married Mary McCoy 1672.

ROBERT CAMPBELL,

Son of Duncan, children Hugh, John and Charles.

CHARLES CAMPBELL,

Son of Robert. Married in 1739 to Mary Trotter. Their children were Robert, Hugh, John, Charles, James, Joseph, William, Elizabeth and Mary.

CHARLES CAMPBELL,

Son of Charles; born in Rockbridge in 1741; married to Mary Ann Downey in 1764. Both husband and wife lived to an advanced age, she dying in 1834 at the age of 82, and he dying in 1826 at the age of 85. Charles Campbell was among the Presbyterian Trustees of 1776 and also the Charter Trustees of Washington College. The following quotation is taken from the address of Dr. Grigsby, above referred to:

"Charles Campbell did not actively embark in political affairs, but commanded a company at the siege of York; and he delighted in old age to recount the details of the siege. He was noted for his piety, was fond of books, encouraged literary institutions, and trained his numerous sons and daughters in sound learning. One of his sons, Dr. Samuel L. Campbell, who was a pupil of the academy, a trustee, and for a short period its rector, was a good scholar and a correct and graceful writer; and we owe to his pen not only a graphic account of the infant academy and of its early pupils, but a valuable historical memoir of the battle of Point Pleasant. Charles Campbell, your trustee, who lived as late as 1826, is well remembered by many now living. He was about middle size; and in his old age, as he sat on an elder in the New Providence church, on the left of the pulpit, with his white hair flowing, decrepit with years, but firm in faith and zealous for the glory of God, he was a striking figure. He was long a Magistrate, and did not hesitate to use the whole rigor of the law in repressing violations of the Sabbath. At your annual celebrations the good old man drove from his residence twelve miles distant to this hill in his carriage drawn by two rather old white horses, who rejoiced in the names of Grey and Goody, and listened with rapt attention to all the exercises of the day."

The following were the children of Charles Campbell and Mary Ann Downey, his wife: Samuel L., Charles (died at 18), James, Mary, William, John, Isaac (died at 16), Rachel and two others who died in infancy.

On Gravestone—John Campbell, Charleston, South Carolina, d. July 10, 1790.

Sir Colin Campbell, 4th of the House of Glenorchy, was joined with the Earls of Morton, Gowrie, and others in establishing the policy of the Church and Government in 1573, and in 1580 he built the old Castle of Balloch, so called from the Gaelic word said to mean the outlet of the loch, and now named "Taynpuith." By marriage into the family of Tosach, his 4th son Archibald, obtained the estate of Monzie, but died without heirs and his daughter Beatrice, became ancestress of the Campbells of Lawers and Loudon.

Sir Duncan, 5th of Glenorchy in 1617, was made Keeper of the Forests of Mamlorn, Finglenmore, and others and was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1627. His 2nd son became Sir Robert Campbell of Glenfalloch, and his 3rd son, Archibald, became the ancestor of the families of Monzie, Lochlan and Finab. Sir Duncan who was known as "Donacha Dubh na Curraichd, or Black Duncan of the Cowl, was a patron of Jameson, the Vandyke of Scotland, and was eminent for his taste in building and planting. (Black Book of Taymouth). He d. in 1631. Sir Colin, his son and successor, married Juliana Campbell, dau. of the Earl of Loudon, and outvalued him in his taste of Elegant things, and employed a German painter to paint "thretty brods of the Kings of Scotland, Great Britain, France, and Ireland" (ibid). dying in 1640, he was succeeded by his brother—Sir Robert Campbell, previously of Glenfalloch, who married Isobel, dau. of Machlan MacIntosh, chief of the Clan Chattan.

Sir John Campbell, 8th of Glenorchy, was a man of great capacity, and was deemed an able statesman in his time, but he was destitute of all scruple. He was loyal to Charles II, and was created Earl of Caithness in 1677, by a quibble of trickery to be related elsewhere, and empowered by the Scotch Privy Council. He marched to take possession of the patrimony of the Sinclairs, with whom in 1679 he fought the bloody battle of Altamarlach. Over this usurpation, a sense of justice prevailed, and to pacify him, in 1681, he was created Earl of Breadalbane and Holland. He was in great favor with King James VI, was bitterly opposed to the Union and it is said he was on the point of joining the Earl of Mar in 1715. He died in his 81st year.

John, 2nd Earl of Breadalbane, was a representative in 1734 and 1741, and John, 3rd Earl, was in his earlier years, Master of the Horse to the Princess Royal in 1718, and Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Denmark in 1720. He died in 1782 without issue, when the Earldom went to his distant cousin John, Grandson of Colin, third son of the above named, Sir Robert Campbell, previously of Glenfalloch. The 4th Earl was created Marquess of Breadalbane in 1831, and died in 1834, leaving a son John, 2nd Marquess, but he dying without issue in 1862, the Earldom went to his cousin John, a descendant of William Campbell of Glenfalloch, 5th sor. of the above named Sir Robert. The 6th Earl died in 1871, and was succeeded by his son, Gavin, 7th Earl, who was created a marquis of Breadalbane in 1885.

The first Campbell of the line of Cawdor was Sir John Campbell, third son of Archibald, 2nd Earl of Argyll, who married Muriel, daughter and heiress of Sir John Archibald Cawdor (or Calder) of that ilk, who died in 1498. Her Uncles resolved if they could to set her aside, and with the aid of a kinsman, the Precentor of Ross, they brought forward some curious evidence to prove her illegitimate. But the little Muriel was not unfriended. Her estates held of the Crown, thus the King bestowed her ward and marriage upon the Earl of Argyll, a powerful guardian, who in her 12th year bestowed her as a bride on his third son, John in 1510—a marriage that had many advantages, and perhaps no other alliance in Scotland could have enabled the young heiress to hold her own among rough and hostile neighbors.

"He was a Campbell of the old stamp," says the Book of the Thanes of Cawdor, "Seeking incessantly to increase his possessions and influence." His treaties with cousins of his own class, with the MacLeans, the MacDonalds, the MacNeills show both his policy and his acknowledged power—His possessions in Argyll are large and interesting. He seems already to have pretended some right to Isla. The grim keep of Cawdor, with its turrets and rambling out-works is one of the most remarkable edifices in Scotland, and among some sculpture on a stone date 1510,—the year of Muriel's marriage—is carved a fox smoking a short tobacco pipe, 75 years before Sir Walter Raleigh introduced smoking into England. (It was somewhat longer than that, I think, 1609, etc.)

From 1524 till 1546, the year of his death, Sir John Campbell resided permanently at Cawdor. Lady Muriel survived him long, also their son, Archibald. She died in 1573 resigning her thanedom in favor of her grandson, John, who married Mary Keith, the daughter of an opulent, noble, and honorable family, the Earl Marischal. The Reformation brought him the accession of the Prior lands of Ardchattan.

Lady Cawdor, being a sister of the Countess of Argyll, on the death of the Earl in 1584, Sir John Campbell was one of the 6 persons named to manage the Earldom, during the young peer's min-
